

This scarf reproduces a silk escape map from the Second World War. British Airmen were given these maps, made from lightweight material, to use in the event of landing in enemy territory whilst on missions over Europe. It was hoped it would help them evade capture and find their way back to Britain.